Dear Dr McBride,

RE: "OUR TEAM ARE NOT TRAINED IN RELATION TO PTSD (POST TRAUMATIC STRESS DISORDER)"

After lately reading about the suspected misdiagnosis problems relating to Dr Michael Watt, I feel I should point out to you that I have recently had what I see as extremely serious problems trying to communicate successfully with Community Nurse Carmel Reilly CPN, and with Consultant Psychiatrist Dr Lauren Edgar, who I understand are both based at the Knockbracken Healthcare Centre, in Belfast.

For no good reason that I know of, it appears to me that Nurse Reilly and Consultant Psychiatrist Dr Lauren Edgar must have both decided to completely ignore several important parts of the written information I sent to them, in connection with my efforts to get help from them, relating to the growing set of serious consequences for me --- since 1998 -- of wrongdoing "at the hands of individuals and public officials and bodies": in the words of my former GP, Dr Michael McCavert.

On May 4th last I sent an email to Dr David Cheyne, my present GP, requesting an update for Dr McCavert's "To Whom It May Concern" letter of October 28th 2005. A copy of the email in question, to Dr Cheyne, can be viewed at the following www location:

<http://www.humanrightsireland.com/DrDavidCheyneGP/4May2018/Gmail.html>

To date, I have not received any reply from Dr Cheyne to the email at the www address immediately above.

Any help you might be able to provide me with for the purpose of remedying the difficulties of mine referred to in this email, would be greatly appreciated by me.

Additional information relating to the problems of mine in question can be found in the texts provided in the sections (towards the end) below, which have been copied from a recent FACEBOOK publication at:

Yours sincerely,

William Finnerty.

(Involving suspected misdiagnosis issues)

===

A total of 3,200 neurology patients have been recalled so far, according to the Department of Health.

The recall was announced following an independent review of consultant neurologist Dr Michael Watt's work.

So far 281 patients have been reassessed but the department said it is too early to say if there have been any cases of misdiagnosis.

'I feel diminished by what's happened'

They say other cases will be reviewed, involving former patients, and they are examining a redress scheme.

The number of recalled patients may increase further.

An independent inquiry into the patient recall, which involves both health service and private patients, has already been announced. It will be chaired by barrister Brett Lockhart QC.

At a briefing led by Permanent Secretary Richard Pengelly and Chief Medical Officer Dr Michael McBride on Friday, MLAs were told that Dr Hugo Mascie-Taylor, an internationally recognised expert, has been appointed as a panel member for the inquiry.

'Concerted action'

"It is always a very difficult time when the service falls short of the high standards rightly expected by the public," said Dr McBride.

"It is essential that concerted action is taken and that lessons are learned for the benefit of patients."

Departmental officials also gave a commitment to maintain detailed communication with elected representatives and stakeholders as the recall processes continue.

Richard Pengelly issued a public apology on behalf of the health service.

On Thursday neurology patients affected by Northern Ireland's biggest health recall received an apology from the Department of Health's top civil servant, Richard Pengelly.

The permanent secretary said the health and social care services "apologised unreservedly".

Neurology is the treatment of brain conditions including MS, Parkinson's Disease and Motor Neurone Disease- all of which can be life-changing.

The recall has left many patients very concerned about the potential for misdiagnosis, however, many of Dr Watt's former patients have expressed support and gratitude for the care he provided.

Some patients praised his bedside manner but admitted to being concerned about his workload.

Dr Watt is a consultant neurologist at the Royal Victoria and City hospitals in Belfast and also treated patients at private clinics.

Many of his patients were recalled following a case review by the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust.

Dedicated helpline

Families of deceased patients of Dr Watt can contact the RQIA on 028 95 361111 and ask for the neurology review help desk.

The RQIA will be establishing a dedicated helpline in the coming days.

They have also established an internal steering group to oversee the two reviews. Patricia Gordon from the MS Society will act as a patient representative on the group.

Who is Dr Watt?

Dr Watt is a consultant neurologist at the Royal Victoria and City hospitals in Belfast, and also treated patients at private clinics.

He qualified in medicine in 1985 from Queen's University, Belfast and specialised in neurology in June 1996.

Up until June 2017, he was one of 10 consultant neurologists working for the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust.

Dr Watt, who is in his 50s, treats patients with neurological conditions - including Parkinson's disease, epilepsy, multiple sclerosis (MS), stroke and motor neurone disease (MND).

The Ulster Independent Clinic said that Dr Watt operated a private practice but he voluntarily suspended it in June 2017.

He is not currently treating patients, but remains a paid employee of the trust.

What happened?

Concerns about potential misdiagnoses of Dr Watt's patients were formally raised in December 2016 by a GP.

The trust said that patient safety measures were immediately put in place which included restrictions on aspects of Dr Watt's practice.
