Dear Sir/Madam,

I suffer from Complex-Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (C-PTSD) as a direct result of the years of extremely serious criminal abuse which I have been subjected to by the Government of the Republic of Ireland, in response to my efforts to challenge extremely serious wrongdoing by the Government of the Republic of Ireland.

For evidence of the above-mentioned allegations, please see the attached copy of the "To Whom It May Concern Letter" dated October 28th 2005 from Dr Michael McCavert GP.

Despite my very best efforts since October 28th 2005 (and for several years before then), I have still not succeeded in finding legal representation of the kind which recognises the factual existence, in practical ways, of national and international legislation based on the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948); and, without such legal representation, I know of no way of recovering from the C-PTSD injuries I am suffering from.

Any help your organisation might be able to provide me with, for the purpose of finding the kind of legal representation I need, would be very much appreciated.

Yours sincerely,

Mr William Finnerty

To Whom It May Concern:

RE: William Finnerty, 62 Main Street, Gortin, BT79 8HH

I have been this man's general practitioner for the last five or six months. Over this period I have met William on eight or ten occasions and I have access to some records from the psychiatric hospital about him and I've also had some communications with Gerry Madden Senior Psychiatric Social Worker at Lissan House in Omagh.

As a result of our prolonged conversations I have come to some conclusions and they are as follows:

Firstly that Williams symptoms and behaviours are the result of traumas and stresses over years and these traumas and stresses have come at the hands of individuals and public officials and bodies that he has encountered in his struggles to try to correct environmental wrong doings. He has suffered considerable frustration at not being able to get legal representation and indeed has been refused legal aid as well. On reviewing the depth and range of his symptoms he has got PTSD Complex as a result of all his trauma. I think William's mental health is very much at risk and any attempt to produce undue pressure on his mental state will certainly have a detrimental effect.

William has been through enough and needs support and understanding for PTSD (Post Traumatic Stress Disorder) and I hope he can be given sympathetic handling by the officials with whom he comes in contact.

Yours sincerely,

Dr McCavert
